OUR MISSION

To Breed & Produce THE BEST PERFORMING Cannabis Seed Lots IN THE WORLD

Seed is the most common and cost effective way to propagate annual crops. It is the standard in agriculture. In the cannabis space, seed has been notoriously inconsistent and at times downright unreliable, and so the industry has leaned heavily on cloning to achieve repeatable results.

However, cloning is expensive, inefficient, and has been a major contributor to the transmission of pest and disease throughout the industry. At Atlas, our mission is to breed for uniformity and high performance, produce elite genetics, and to standardize seed in the industry.

All of our parent lines have been initially selected for field performance and repeatedly inbred to lock in the desired traits. They are then outcrossed judiciously to produce industry-leading, elite seed lots that are as close to true F1s as are available to cultivators anywhere. Each line undergoes extensive trialing on our own licensed farm, so growers know we literally stand behind everything we produce.

COMPANY BACKGROUND

Cannabis Bred FOR AGRICULTURE

Atlas Seed was founded by seasoned winegrape, vegetable, and cannabis farmers in Sonoma County, California that were searching for genetics that didn't yet exist: uniform, stable, & vigorous hybrids that would fit into their existing, time tested agricultural model.

Atlas Seed breeds, produces, and grows agronomically oriented day-neutral, semi-full term, and full term cannabis and hemp varieties for the global production market, focusing primarily on highest yields, terpenes, mold resistance, and potency.

We are growers first and foremost, and breed with farmers' needs in mind. Because we develop varieties to perform at scale in commercial contexts, including adverse outdoor environments, our genetics provide top shelf performance for greenhouse, indoor, & home growers alike.

AROMA FAMILIES

Cannabis Family SCENT PROFILES

Inspired by the SC Labs and Emerald Cup work on terpene classes, the Atlas Seed Aroma families are our attempt to understand and categorize cannabis varieties by aromas, terpenes, smell compounds, and genetic lineage. Use it as a guide to find what you need, and be sure to read up more on our website, as this is a rather exhaustive subject.

LIGHT CYCLE TYPES

AUTOFLOWER PROFILE

Autoflowering plants have a strong appetite for light! The more light they receive, the faster they grow and come to maturity. True autoflowering plants can come to maturity even under a 24 hour daytime light cycle (no darkness/night). Weak, low watt lighting typically used to keep clone plants "in veg" will not speed up the growth of autoflower plants or prevent them from flowering.

It can nearly not be said enough that the trickiest part about planting autoflowers is their initial establishment phase, especially when transplanting larger quantities. They are built to race to reproduction and thus rapidly develop a tap root that prefers to grow unobstructed throughout its life cycle. If autos experience any root binding in propagation they will initiate early and their vegetative and flowering potential will be decimated. Therefore for indoor grows we generally recommend planting autos in their "forever home" and discourage up-potting.

FULL TERM PHOTOPERIOD PROFILE

Full term genetics, and their requisite light change that initiates their flowering cycle, are an exception in the botanical realm but the rule in the cannabis world. Full term genetics express many of the sought after characteristics in the modern cannabis marketplace: high potencies and strong & diverse terpene profiles. In terms of peak quality for AAA, artisanal, premium flower brands, indoor and greenhouse light assisted full term flowers are second to none.

SEMI-FULL TERM PHOTOPERIOD PROFILE

Semi-full terms are a cross between a photoperiod strain and an autoflower. Though less commonly known and understood in the legacy and legal markets, semi-full terms are also referred to as sub-autos, quicks, quiks, fast flowering, early finishing, and fast finishing photos.

Semi-full term genetics finish earlier outdoors than their photoperiod counterparts, have incredible vigor, and are heavy yielders.
